Mr. Taylor concentrates his practice on litigation matters. He represents a variety of individuals and organizations in litigation-related matters including bankruptcy, corporate and general litigation. Mr. Taylor has represented debtors-in-possession, official committees of unsecured creditors, liquidating trustees, secured creditors, banks, landlords and a full range of unsecured creditors with any number of claims arising in bankruptcy matters. Mr. Taylor, on behalf of numerous Liquidation Trusts or Trustees, has prosecuted literally thousands of preference actions. He has also defended hundreds of others. Mr. Taylor's experience goes beyond bankruptcy and touches upon general corporate litigation, state receiverships, trademark litigation, cross border franchise disputes and other commercial litigation.

Mr. Taylor co-authored an article concerning the practice of using "Designation Rights Sales" in bankruptcy matters. This article was published by the American Bankruptcy Institute as that organization's featured cover article in September, 2001. He also co-authored "Second Circuit OKs Asset Sales Despite Significant Present and Future Liabilities," featured in the December 14, 2004, American Bankruptcy Institute Journal.
