Known for his practical approach to complex commercial restructurings and experience in high-stakes bet-the-company situations, Justin R. Alberto has guided clients through some of the nation's most notable chapter 11 cases.

EXPERIENCE

Practicing in the areas of corporate restructuring and litigation, with an emphasis on the representation of debtors, creditors' committees and other significant stakeholders, Justin has vast experience negotiating and litigating issues involving valuation, inter-creditor and allocation disputes, section 363 asset sales and contested confirmations in proceedings involving an array of industries, most notably retail, healthcare, pharmaceuticals, life sciences and automotive.

Some of Justin's most notable recent engagements include his representations of the official committees of unsecured creditors of Purdue Pharma, Mallinckrodt PLC, Silicon Valley Bank and JCPenney. On the company-side, Justin has led dozens of debtors through complex chapter 11 restructurings and achieved nationwide notoriety for his successful restructuring of True Religion Apparel during the height of Covid-19, which to this day remains an example of one of the few retailers that emerged from bankruptcy during the pandemic and continues to thrive.

In addition, Justin is an experienced litigator with trial experience in state and federal courts involving issues of corporate law and distressed commercial situations. Justin is a certified mediator for the United States Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware and is included on the Register of Mediators and Arbitrators maintained by the Court.

He is a frequent speaker on issues involving mass torts bankruptcies, retail restructurings, valuation and debtor-in-possession finance. Justin also previously served as a recurring guest lecturer of Commercial Bankruptcy Practice and Procedure at Temple University Beasley School of Law and currently serves as a mentor to law students at Widener University Delaware School of Law and Wilmington University School of Law.
